A Clear Warning

DRITTEH PARLIAMENTARIAN John Meredith Temple, now visiting Victoria, hopes to sound out ublic opinion across Canada on Britain's proposed atry into the European Common Market before he

Because he is an ardent advocate of British union with Europe, Mr. Temple will in all likelihood find the result of his survey disappointing inasmuch as it will almost certainly prove to him that the opinion of the ordinary Canadian man-in-the-street on the matter deviates little from that already ex-pressed efficielly by the Canadian government.

This view, made clear by Ottawa on numerous occasions, is simply that though Canada regrets any move Britain may make to join the ECM because it would not only mark the end of existing Commonwealth trade arrangements but could also result in the sintegration of the Commonwealth itself, it is a deeision that Britain must make on its own and in its

In supporting the Macmilian government's argu-ment that Britain must join the ECM to survive eco-nomically, Mr. Temple adds another reason on his own behalf—a reason which is both intriguing and a little confusing. "Mr. Khrushchev is against it," "therefore it must be a pretty good thing

However, he neglected to mention that a large number of distinguished British and Commonwealth leaders are also "against it" including two former prime ministers, Lord Attlee and Lord Avon, while third and greatest of them all, Sir Winston Churchill,

Much has been made over the recent publication of a letter written by Sir Winston some time ago in which he sets out his views on Britain's entry into the ECM. Both the opponents and the proponents of British union with Europe are now busily inter-preting them as supporting their individual attitudes.

In his letter Sir Winston declares that the Macmillan government was right to apply to join the ECM not because I am yet convinced that we shall be able to join but because there appears to be no other way which we can find out exactly whether the conditions of membership are acceptable.

He also has this to say: "In the negotiations . . . the six countries should recognize that the Commonwealth is one of the most valuable assets that we could bring, for them as well as ourselves, and should be ready to work out arrangements to prevent any damage to Commonwealth interests."

Thus does this letter, written more than a year ago, contain a clear warning to the negotiators not to sacrifice the Commonwealth. It is a warning which should be heeded. It is a warning which Mr. Temple will find reflected in the views of most Canadians and one which he should carry back with him to Westminster regardless of his own personal views—or those of Mr. Khrushchev, for that matter.

THE MEETING of two American atomic submarines under the Polar ice cap can scarcely be regarded "historic," but even if it does not match the spectacular nature of a near-rendezvous in space it is an offset of importance. It indicates the efficiency of the U.S. neval arm in this realm.

It was to be expected that after the first journey by a U.S. submarine under ice at the top of the globe another would follow, and probably more than one nusione break with the past in this field of exploration.

All eyes are lixed on the skies these days but in its own way this mode of travel is equally noteworthy. Were the world to be left in peace a new avenue of conveyance might open up. Journeying beneath the waves offers a freedom from elements that affect surface and flying passage, and there is no telling what yet may eventuate in this direction.

President Kennedy concedes that America is behind the Soviet Union in space flight but promises to catch up with the Russian lead and there is no doubt of the dedication to this end of his administration or of the American people.

Meantime it seems apparent that if America lags in space it leads in underwater venturing. There is at least no Soviet announcement of a comparable nature and if equal success in this realm had been achieved would not have been slow to claim credit.

This submarine rendezvous is a tribute therefore to U.S. skill and ingenuity, qualities not to be assessed only in relation to space travel. Mr. Kennedy has every reason to be pleased and to congratulate the officers and men involved.

Bottled Danger

TIRE CHIEFS of British Columbia meeting in Vancouver have agreed that plastic containers for gasoline are dangerous and, along with glass bottles subject to breakage, should be banned from use for this purpose.

The example cited for them by the provincial fire marshal was that of a 20-month-old boy who pulled a plastic container of gasoline from a basement shelf and lost his life when the fuel spilled from a loose cap and was ignited by a pilot light. The fire was the more intense, the marshal said, because the container melted, releasing all its contents,

We cannot argue with the fire experts' assess-ent of the plastic bottle as hazardous, even though it is difficult to see that a metal container would be appreciably safer under the same circumstances. In midst of flames, surely its remaining contents could be expected to ignite, perhaps with explosive

But be that as it may, the conditions surrounding this distressing accident should have more attention: the bottle of vaporous fuel, with its cap loose, stored in a basement, in some proximity to a burning pilot light, and in reach of an infant.

The parents of the child paid a terrible price for thoughtlessnam, whether their own or someone else's, in the handling of gasoline.

But in this age of power-mowers and rotary tillers and sutboard motors the same conditions probably could be found in hundreds if not thousands of British Columbia homes. It would be unfortunate if the hasty impression were created by the fire chiefs' discussions that the plastic container was the villain in the case quoted. The killer was gasoline insuffi-

Straw's the Berries

One of the major problems of the leactyard gurdener today is how to maintain the human content of his soil. Chemical furtilizers gione are not enough—bulky organic material is needed also, or your proclems ground degenerates from living that to life-less dirt.

Farmword or etable manure is less dirt.

Farmyard or stable manure is ideal, but the stuff lest too easy to come by these days, and in any case, our womenfolk dest assess to take very kindly to the idea of a big manure pile in the middle of the garden. Compost is marvellous stuff, and certainly there is no excuse for wasting the fallen leaves and lawn mowings one accumulates through the season, but the way an enormous pile of leaves will shrink down through the winter is appalling, and when the time comes to spread and dig in your ripe sompost, there is never enough to go around.

Straw seems to be one of the best answers to this problem. Baled straw doesn't take up much storage space in the garden, and it isn't too expen-sive, especially if you buy it in lots of five or six bales at a time. Some times it is even possible to secure a lead of spoiled hay or straw just for the cartage charges, and this is just as effective for our purpose as the good stuff.

Straw is especially good where small fruits are grown. It is applied as a mulch to the surface, and can go down any time of the year, whenever the gardener can find the time, and spread to a depth of about nine inches around and among the bushes and between the rown. It is best to put down a sprinkle of ammonium sulphate first, one cupful per square yard.

With a good straw mulch, there will be no digging or cultivation to do in the small fruit plot through the winter, and no hoeing to carry out in the spring. The soil remains lones and open under the mulch, never becoming crusted or capped. The worms pull enough straw into the strain heart its texture and the ground he. prove its texture, and the ground becomes matted with the fibrous roots of your fruit bushes right up to the surface.

Black currents are especially appreciative of this treatment, and in fact, they push shead so fact that extra-severe pruning is necessary. The straw mulch works well, too, on raspherries, logans, and red and white currents.

With goossberries, while the straw mulch is just as effective in premoting good growth, it does have one small disadvantage—your barry crop comes a let later when the straw is spread in fall or winter, for the ground takes longer to warm up. ground takes longer to warm up. This inte cropping is obviated if the mulching is delayed until early May.

The effect of this straw treatment has to be seen to be believed. It makes working among the bushes far cieuner, and in winter, the muddy boots problem is a thing of the past. It makes picking and pruning a pleasure. As the straw gradually disintegrales, you simply top it up with more of the same.

I have an idea that a lot of the queer and obscure nutritional dis-orders we encounter with small fruits will automatically disappear when the humus content of the soil is held at a high level, and an easy way to accomplish this is to work more and more straw into the soil.

Bullfights Bore Spaniards

RONDA, Spain—Ronda is a lovely, sun-drenched Spanish town hung high in the mountains behind Marbella. Spaniards lived there first. Then the Romans lived there, bringing laws and roads. Then the Moors lived there, bringing architecture and mathematics. Then the tourists took over, bringing cameras and money.

Ronda is the home town of Antonio Ordonez, the greatest bull-fighter of his time (some say of the last 50 years) and also of his father who was the blue-eyed boy wonder who was the blue-eyed boy wonder of Spain for a few short years. The other day they had a memorial bull-fight for the father, the model for the bullfighter in The Sun Also Rises, with Antonio, the son, as the star and chief attraction. and chief attraction.

You get to Ronda up a road that climbs and climbs up a thousand hairpin turns, each one nestled pre-carlously around a Spanish gorge cariously around a Spanish gorge which looks, from the car looking down, a thousand feet deep. We must love builfights very much to make a journey like this, Or do we? Frankly, I'm getting a little bored with builfights. I came not in spite of those thousand hairpin turns but heceuse of them. because of them.

I loved driving the car, turning and twisting up those mountains with their distant glimpses of the sea, wondering if the Romans came this way in all that clanking armor and how long it took them. I loved the city itself, suspended as it is between a deep gorge, connected by a bridge that looks like one of the illustra-tions out of the Wonder Books, pure fairy tale Gothic, over precipices as sheer, sculptured, and improbable as Snow White.

Snow White.

I liked exploring the town which is full of beautiful houses hung on mountainsides commanding views that are almost unbearably picthat are almost unbearably pic-turesque. In Ronda, little smiling boys invite you to inspect somebody else's house. They are proud of the houses and they want you to see them, even if they belong to some-body else, because after all they're part of the town which is their town.

You give the little smiling boy a peseta and in you go and are shown around by a housekeeper, a stable boy, or somebody who explains that the Marquesa is away. In any case, she doesn't spend much time there. The Marquesa probably has 17 other houses, in none of which she spends very much time, till of them fully staffed all the time (in Spain the very much time, all of them fully staffed all the time (in Spain, the rich are very rich), so you drift through the quaint and unlived-in rooms, under the paintings of imperious, wigged ancestors, look at the swimming pool framed in gardens which are drenched in shade, formal lovely and complexities as here. mal, lovely, and overlooking a back-drop of mountains and fields and old Moorish ruins which prints itself like a photographic plate on your

So to the builfight. Ronda has the oldest builting in Spain, a tiny jewel of a ring composed of stone arches that sometimes interfere with your view of the fight. It's a tiny ring, really, but it's not full. And this is Ordonez' home town! If there's a Spaniard within 100 feet of me, I Ordenez had two fights that day, one in his home town, and another 100 kilometres farther on, so he fought the first two bulls carefully, professionally, unspectacularly. Still he got two ears for the first fight, two ears and a tail for the second, a bit more than he deserved. Well, it's his home town! If he didn't get a lot of loot, there'd be talk.

After the second fight there was a tumbling and clawing for the exits by the aficionados who'd chase Ordonez 100 kilometres to the next town for the evening builtights (which that it is the control of for the evening outrights (which start at 11 p.m. and go on till 1 a.m.), the real nuts who can't get enough, who pursue Ordenes all over Spain. And who are they? Spaniards? Local people? Old school friends of Ordonez? Don't be silly. They're Americans. A few nutty English, but mostly

Seven years ago, when I first visited Spain, the Americans were the amateurs. ("What's the man doamateurs. I what's the man doing with that long pole there?") Now after seven years of tourism and
American bases, it's "He did 22

Peaceful Co-Star Existence

HOLLYWOOD (NANA)-While their mutual admira-

HOLLYWOOD (NANA)—While their mutual admiration hasn't quite reached the point where they go out on the town together after the show. Joan Crawford and Bette Davis are putting to rout all the dire pre-production forecass that they'd be at each other's throats before What Ever Happened to Baby Jane? was 48 hours old.

On the other hand, with four weeks checked off, everything has been peace and quiet on a stage that first teemed with the expectancy of fireworks at any moment.

Best proof that the two high-powered temperaments are succeeding in their promise to get along no matter what, is that Baby Jane is three days ahead of schedule—and considering the economics of movie business and a $5.000,000 budget that ain't hay.

"If this is a 'feud'," observed producer-director Bob Aldrich, "I'd like to have one going on every movie I make. These two aren't competing against each other—they're both in there to make the best film possible. Leak there..."

He pointed to where the cameras were doing a close up of Joan, her portion of a scene involving dialogue with Bette. Usually in such sequences, the lines of the star who is not being photographed are "fed" to the one before the cameras by the dialogue director or script

Not in this remarkable bit of teamwork, Beside the camera stood Bette, feeding Joan her lines as moticulously as though it had been her own closeup. "Joan does the same for Bette." Aldrich reported happily. "They're both pros—that's why they've stayed at the top "Yet, if his stars pose no problems. Bob can't say as much for a feathered actor which has a key role.

Originally the script called for Joan, confined to her wheelchair, to have a pet parakeet perched on her shoulder. A series of bird auditions disclosed that apperently no parakeet can perch on Joan's shoulder without stealing packs at her ear and cheek.

"It's a sign of affection," the bird man explained diplomatically.
"Then we'd better find one that hates me," said Jean;

So the bird's role was revised. It merely sat in its cage, close but not within bill's reach, of Joan. But on the day of the parakeet's film debut, it got out of the cage, flaw high among the catwalks whence, as eluding its stalkers, it called down occasional derisive chirps to the bird which had replaced it in the role. The fly-away actor remained aloof and aloft for two days.

As the plot of Baby Jane—two sisters living together and hating each other—progresses. Bette contrives siv.

and hating each other progresses. Bette contrives sly, macabre persecutions upon Joan, until the day when Joan, uncowring the luncheon tray her eccentric sister has brought, is horrified to find her missing pet parakeet, stone cold dead in the salad.

Came the sequence where Bette enters with the carefully covered "salad a' la parakeet." With perfect timing, just as she placed the tray before Jean, from high up in the sound stage came a loud, sardonic chirp from the replaced bird actor.

It ruined the sound track, but it would have been spoiled a second later, anyhow, when Bette rolled her eyes aloft, glanced at the covered tray, and in dramatic tones cried: "Ghosts!"

Officers of the Argentine light cruiser La Argentina were hosts last night aboard their ship at a return reception. The previous night Cana-dians entertained aboard HMCS Cape Breton. Seen as they arrived at the

Your Problems

By Ann Landers

I'm sure my sister would ap-prove. It would be wonderful for the baby, too, to grow up with her own father. Please give me your thinking on this very important matter. I am going to take your advice. -LOUISVILLE WOMAN

Dear Woman: A four or five month courtship period know. Never mind what anytwo get along well togethe and wish to marry, go shead.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm 18, graduated from high school last June and went steady with Steve for three straight years. I know what you think of going steady and you are right, but I was too dumb to see it. Sleve was the most at-tractive boy in school and I was plain looking. I was scared to relax my grip for fear some girl would get him

After graduation he began to cool off. He semed to go out of his way to start an argument. Finally he blew up and said, "Find someone else to haul you around. I feel

MONTREAL, Aug. 23rd — Ever feel you're heing watched? I do often . . . especially when I open my purse. That's why when I travel I carry the bulk of my money in Travellers Chequas sold by the BANK OF MONTREAL. They're wonderful for giving you that secure feeling you get from knowing your money is safe. Even if Travellers Cheques are stoling of inst they are uncless to anyone but you, because you have to commissing them when you cash them. They're convenient, too . . . you can each them at any bank and at most hotels, stores and gas stations. So before you so on holidays, moure yournelf against "wallet-worry" by carrying Travellers Cheques . . . available at your neighbourhood branch of "My lant."

PVE LEARNED A LESSON! ... now I always buy more FLEISCHMANN'S 180% Corn Oil MARGA-RINE than I think I'll need ... and, lo and behold! 'more' is just almost enough! You see, used as a spread or in cooking, Fleischmann's is a real-favourite with both my family and friends. You'll flied the truly delicious flavour of Fleischmann's guarantees its popularity. And diet conscious folks appreciate the fact that it's made from pure corn ell and is therefore low, low in saturated fats. Ask your doctor about its henefits in your daily dist ... its benefits to your budget I'm sure you'll discover for yourself. Truly, Fleischmann's Corn Oil Margarine is a 'buy' I sincerely recommend!

There has never been a gown like 'Tonight', the gown with the built-in bra. You can't see it, but you can feel the difference.

Women have never slept so beautifully before "Tonight". Outside, it's delicately beautiful-creating a new silhouette, draped in luxurious Nylon tricot, edged in exquisite hand-cut lace. The bra inside is invisible, gives that light night support that's wanted. It pampers but never hampers, never pressures you, never binds. You can't see it in fact, but you can feel the difference. By TERRY HAMMOND Colonist Legislative Reporter The billion-word controversy over development of the Columbia River is all over and all that remains is to build $400,000,000 worth of dams and hydro plants, according to a quietly confident Premier

Bennett,

Looking like a well-mannered eat who none-the-less has swallowed the mouse, the premier left Victoria for Ottawa last night to wrap up the loose ends and set the stage for early federal ratification of the international Columbia River treaty.

The key to the complex puzzle which has kept Victoria and Ottawa at sword's point for more than a year and which even had severe repercussions in Washington, D.C., will be compromise—but it won't be a compromise—but it won't be a compromise which inhibits B.C.'s right to sell its downstream power entitlement in the U.S. for a period of probably 20 years.

Mr. Bennett will negotiate the Columbia deal with federal Justice Minister Donald Fleming at a meeting scheduled to start at 10 a.m. on Monday.
